

Tanger Pays $60M for Ohio Town Center as Open-Air Retail Consolidation Accelerates

$60 m

Debt / financing

On May 28, 2026, Tanger closed on a $60 million acquisition of The Town Center at Levis Commons, a 300,000-square-foot mixed-use development in Perrysburg, Ohio. The seller: Hill...

The clean read

- On May 28, 2026, Tanger closed on a $60 million acquisition of The Town Center at Levis...
- The company has been repositioning its portfolio toward higher-quality open-air assets...
- For Tanger, the deal adds a stabilized cash-flowing asset with a weighted average lease...

The numbers tell the story

$60 m

Debt / financing

$200

Debt / financing

$3.5 b

Debt / financing

This is a capital stack story

The firm is not a public REIT and faces no quarterly earnings pressure, but the decision to sell now suggests a view that retail cap rates have compressed to near-cycle lows.

"Tanger is a publicly traded REIT with a market cap of approximately $3.5 billion."

- The deal also signals that debt markets are open for high-quality retail acquisitions.
- What this means for the broader market: consolidation is accelerating.

Who is moving the market

- On May: central to the transaction.
- The Town Center: central to the transaction.
- Ohio. The: central to the transaction.

Where the deal can break

- Selling now captures a premium relative to pre-pandemic valuations while avoiding the capital...
- The transaction reflects a broader trend: institutional capital rotating into dominant open-air...
- Private capital, particularly family offices and regional developers, has been the primary...

What lenders and investors notice

$200

Debt / financing

$3.5 b

Debt / financing

$350 t

Debt / financing

The broader implication

The deal also signals that debt markets are open for high-quality retail acquisitions.

- What this means for the broader market: consolidation is accelerating.
- The question now is whether the next wave of sellers will be as willing to transact at current...

The question now is whether the next wave of sellers will be as willing to transact at...

The headline is the transaction. The story is the structure.

If the capital stack works, the deal becomes a signal. If it does not, it becomes a warning.

LIGHT TOWER GROUP

Debt & Equity Placement